What's the Conference About?
The theme for STC 2010 is “Building IT for Tomorrows Education”. The guiding principle around the theme will be looking into the future of technology as it directly impacts education. We are tapping into the minds of technology leaders to share their vision and aid SUNY in revolutionizing the university system for tomorrow's learners. What will IT's role be in forging this new education frontier? How can we poise campuses to be technological leaders that make SUNY the top educational system throughout the United States? STC 2010 will foster awareness and begin the dialogue.

Additional information about STC 2010 can be found on our conference web site at: www.stc.suny.edu

Who Attends?
Conference participants will arrive with specific expectations about what will happen over the three days of the conference - that they will explore new technologies, search for best practices from colleagues, share solutions and grow professionally. Presentations by industry experts and SUNY peers, professional development workshops, a keynote address centered on emerging technologies and a 2-day technology exhibition will deliver experiences and opportunities to accomplish these goals.

The Computing Officers Association (COA), the Telecommunications Officers Association (TOA) and the Educational Technology Officers Association (EdTOA) of State University of New York convene the SUNY Technology Conference annually. These organizations are comprised of computing professionals, educators, telecommunication professionals, and media specialists from within SUNY. The institutions represented include SUNY System Administration and sixty-four campuses comprised of; four major university centers, nine doctoral granting institutions, thirteen university colleges, eight technology colleges and thirty community colleges. Together they serve well over 415,000 students.

SUNY attendance in the past has been in excess of 300, with overall participation in excess of 500. This year will be no exception.

Benefits of Exhibiting/Sponsoring
The conference will explore a broad range of technologies and issues relating to administrative and academic computing, policy, infrastructure, educational technology, media, telecommunications, leadership and management. Professional development activities augment a strong program of presentations, expert panels and round table discussions.

Participation of many of the university’s business partners in this event has in the past, made the conference a valuable component of technology planning for campuses and SUNY wide decision makers. In the hope that STC 2010 will offer the same benefit, we are calling upon our partners to participate this year and to demonstrate how their solutions have evolved to help SUNY to enhance innovation, resources and services.
